The Great Tragedian Leaves the Stage Forever.

EDWIN BOOTH IS NO MORE.

After Hovering Between Life and Death For Several Months the End Comes This Morning Shortly After 1 O'Clock Brief Biography of His Eventful Life.

NEW YORK, June 7.—Edwin Booth, the great tragedian, quietly passed away at his apartments in the Player Club at 1:15 o'clock this morning. At his bedside at the time were Mr. and Mrs. Grosman, his son-in-law and daughter; his physician, Dr. St. Clair Smith; Superintendent McGonigle, Wm. Bispham, an intimate friend, and Charles Farryll. The death of the renowned actor, which had been expected at any time during the past few days, was very peaceful, being scarcely noticeable to the anxious watchers at his bedside.

EDWIN BOOTH.

The evening of Monday, Sept. 10, 1849, saw Edwin Booth's first appearance on the stage. It was at the Boston museum, and he played the part of Tressel in "Richard III." His father, the great Junius Brutus Booth, taking the leading role. The part of Tressel is a very small one, and young Booth took it quite unexpectedly. He was acting as his father's dresser during the engagement. The stage manager had been cast for Tressel, but he was overworked, tired and almost ill, and he begged young Booth, who finally consented, to play the part. The arrangement was made without consulting the father, whose first intimation that his son was to make his professional debut that night was when Edwin appeared in the dressingroom costumed as Tressel. The father offered to lend the boy his spurs, and the offer was accepted.

When Edwin returned to the dressing-room, after having done his work on the stage, he was anxious to know what his father, who had from time to time closely watched his brief performance, would say in criticism, but the father merely held out his foot and said: "Give me my spurs."

Booth's last appearance on any stage was at an afternoon performance of Hamlet at the Brooklyn Park theater Saturday, April 4, 1891. Booth's acting was far from strong—the effects of his advancing age and failing powers were plainly visible—yet he was given a veritable ovation by the audience. He made a brief speech in acknowledgment, and when he left the theater the street was crowded by his admirers, who cheered him wildly as he drove away. Between that evening in Boston and that afternoon in Brooklyn a great career was stretched its years, a career that will be studied with interest and admiration long as records of the American stage exist.

Edwin Booth was born in Harford county, about 20 miles from Baltimore, Nov. 15, 1833. His father, Junius Brutus Booth, was 37 years old then, and in the zenith of his famous actor. The mother had been, if not a flower girl in Covent Garden, London. She was a beautiful woman. There were seven children, of whom John Wilkes and Edwin were the two to achieve fame on the stage. Junius Brutus, the father's namesake, passed the best part of his career as a hotelkeeper at Manchester-by-the-Sea Mass., where he died. Joseph became a well known physician at Long Branch. Mary Asia married John S. Clarke, the comedian, and wrote lives of both her father and her famous brother.

Edwin was more in sympathy with his erratic, morose father than any other of the children, and, as soon as he became old enough, accompanied him on all his travels, attending to his personal comfort and watching carefully and constantly to keep him from breaking his engagements or giving way to the intense fits of depression from which he periodically suffered. Thus the boy's early youth was passed in a theatrical atmosphere, and his career marked out for him by circumstance.

For two or three years after his almost accidental debut he acted intermittently in his father's company.

In 1852 he went to California. When then news of his father's death reached him (it occurred Nov. 30, 1852) he was stranded without money or friends and almost without food in a Nevada mining camp. He finally got back to San Francisco ragged, worn and weary. Between that time and 1856 he visited Australia and the Sandwich Islands. This whole period was one of misery, many of his journeys being made on foot. He was himself obliged to post the bills that announced his performances. He went hungry often. His road was almost incredibly hard, but he made a triumph out of it, for when he left Frisco early in 1857 or late in 1856 he was given an ovation.

Then he returned to the east, and appeared with success in Boston as Sir Giles Overreach. In New York immediately afterwards he was fairly started on the high road to fame and fortune by his impersonations of Richard III, Shylock, King Lear, Hamlet, Brutus and other roles.

It was about this time that he met Mary Devlin, a southern girl of great beauty and an actress of extraordinary talent. They were married in New York July 7, 1860. She immediately retired from the stage. They were ideally happy. Booth next essayed a season in London without great success, and returned to New York in 1862 to begin his series of representations at the Winter Garden theater, which established him as the greatest living American actor. His "Hamlet" ran for more than 100 nights—a measure of success at that time unheard of. In 1863 his young wife died. For a time he abandoned his profession.

In 1864-5 Booth again appeared in New York as Hamlet. April 17 of the latter year the assassination of President Lincoln by John Wilkes, his brother, startled the world, and engulfed him in a sea of grief and wretchedness. He quit the stage on the very night of the tragedy, intending never to return to it; but the importunities of his friends were so earnest that Jan. 30, 1866, he again stepped upon the stage. His appearance behind the footlights was the signal for nine green cheers, which fairly shook the theater. But never since that fatal 17th of April has he played a professional engagement in Washington.

After his re-entry into public life in 1866 Booth was the central figure of a series of magnificent productions at the Winter Garden. When that theater was destroyed by fire he erected the famous Booth's theater. The revivals of "Romeo and Juliet," "Richelieu," "Julius Caesar" and other great tragedies on its stage mark an epoch in the history of the American drama, but the bankrupted man who gave them to the public. After his failure Mr. Booth found himself nearly $1,000,000 in debt. This vast indebtedness he has since paid, dollar for dollar, with interest.

The death of his second wife was the culmination of a long series of domestic anxieties. He made another and phenomenally successful professional visit to England, and also scored a triumph in Germany.

His tour with Lawrence Barrett began during the season of 1867-8. From both a financial and artistic standpoint they were wonderfully satisfactory. The profits on one season were more than $300,000. In 1889 this connection of the two great American actors was rudely interrupted for a time. On the evening of April 3, at Rochester, Mr. Booth was suddenly stricken with an illness, which it was thought at first would prove fatal. But Booth rallied and acted many times after that.

The first real manifestations of Booth's decadence appeared during the winter of 1890-1 while he was playing with Barrett in New York. It was evident that his powers were failing, and the death of Barrett, sudden and unexpected as it was, was the final blow which broke the tragedian's strength.

Booth loved solitude, admitted few friends to intimacy and lived as quiet a life as his profession would admit. To his generosity the Players' club owes its beautiful home on Gramercy park in New York city.

Later Mr. Booth had lived in Lakewood, N. J., where he owned a beautiful home. It was there that the general breakdown, which eventually led to his death, first manifested itself. Booth was well off and is believed to have left a fortune of more than $500,000.

THE INFANTA AT CHICAGO.

A Great Throng Welcome Her to City and Show.

CHICAGO, June 7.—The Infanta of Spain and suite arrived in Chicago on the Pennsylvania road at 12:10 in the afternoon. The royal party was met at the state line officially by ex-Mayor Washbourne, representing Mayor Harrison and Hobart Chatfield, Chatfield-Taylor, Spanish consul at Chicago.

There was a great crowd, but not much of a popular demonstration. The cheering became more general as the princess neared the Palmer house. The infanta, after responding to the greeting of Mayor Harrison, entered a carriage drawn by four horses, and under escort of two troops of United States cavalry, proceeded at a slow pace to the Palmer, where, after brief attention to their toilet, the princess and her suite went down to luncheon in their private dining room.

After luncheon the infanta felt so fatigued in spite of the luxury surroundings her long ride from New York that she retired to her bed chamber and spent the rest of the afternoon in refreshing sleep. No cards were allowed to be sent in to her, and few called to pay their respects until evening. The members of the Spanish world's fair commission, the Spanish consulate and a few of the high exposition officials called during the evening.

Thursday morning she will go by tally-ho coach to the fair grounds, where she will meet the officials and breakfast with president T. W. Palmer in the administration building. The rest of the day will be spent in viewing the Spanish exhibits. Friday morning will be spent driving in the parks and seeing the city. In the evening the princess will be the guest of honor at a brilliant reception to be given at Potter Palmer's castle home. A host of distinguished foreigners in the city and a small number of Chicago people have been invited. A concert for the princess will be given at the fair grounds early next week.

MADE PUBLIC LAST

The Russian Extradition Treaty Formally Proclaimed.

PRESIDENT'S PROCLAMATION.

For More Than Six Years This Treaty Has Been the Subject of Negotiation Between the Two Countries—It Goes Into Effect June 24—Full Text of the Document.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—The Russian extradition treaty, which has been the subject of negotiation between the two contracting parties for more than six years, which has been amended again and again, and which was threatened with defeat in its final stages, has at last been formally proclaimed.

The ratifications were exchanged in St. Petersburg nearly two months ago, but because it was necessary to observe extraordinary precautions to secure the safe transmission of the document to the United States, the treaty was not received at the department until a late day last week. The treaty was in the French language, and it was necessary to translate the document into English and make very careful comparison between the translation and the original. This work was completed Monday, and Tuesday the president saw it for the first time when Secretary Gresham carried it to the cabinet meeting. All that remained to be done was to make the official proclamation, and that was done later in the afternoon.

The proclamation itself was dated Monday and simply recited the provisions of the treaty, with the announcement that it would go into effect 24 days from date, that is to say June 24. Interest centres on the sections making attempts upon the heads of governments or accessory to such attempts extraditable. These sections in the treaty, as officially promulgated are precisely identical in language with the sections published in Washington dispatches to the United Press of April 22 last. The full text of the treaty is as follows:

It is claimed in official circles that in spite of all that has been said about the treaty, it is similar in scope to all the extradition treaties negotiated by the United States in recent years, although in practice it may be that the administration of the essential difference between the judicial systems of the two countries, which in this case are supposed to be more than usually divergent.

Article 1.—The high contracting parties reciprocally agree to surrender to each other upon mutual requisitions and according to their respective regulations and procedure persons, who, being charged with or convicted of the commission in the territory of the contracting parties, of any of the crimes and offenses specified in the following article, shall seek an asylum or be found within the territory of the other: Provided that this shall only be done upon such evidence of criminality, as, according to the place where the fugitive or person so charged shall be found, would justify his or her apprehension and commitment for trial if the crime or offense had been there committed.

Article 2.—Persons convicted of or charged with any of the following crimes, as well as attempts to commit or participation in the same, as an accessory before the fact, provided such attempt or participation is punishable by the laws of both countries, shall be delivered up in virtue of the provisions of this convention.

First—Murder and manslaughter, when voluntary.

Second—Rape, abortion.

Third—Arson.

Fourth—Burglary, to be defined by the act of breaking and entering by night into the dwellinghouse of another with intent to commit felony. Robbery, defined to be the act of feloniously and forcibly taking from the person of another money or goods by violence, or by putting him in fear. Larceny, when the value of the property stolen shall exceed $300 or 300 roubles.

Fifth—Forgery and the utterance of forged papers, including public, sovereign or governmental acts.

Sixth—The fabrication or circulation of counterfeit money, either coin or paper, or of counterfeit public bonds, coupons of the public debt, bank notes, obligations or in general of any counterfeit title or instrument of credit; the counterfeiting of seals and deeds, impressions, stamps and marks of state and public administrations and the utterance thereof.

Seventh—The embezzlement of public moneys by public officers or depositaries.

Eighth—Embezzlement by any person or persons, hired or salaried, to the detriment of their employers when the value of the property so taken shall exceed $200 or 300 roubles.

Ninth—Piracy or mutiny on shipboard, whenever the crew or part thereof shall have taken possession of the vessel by fraud or by violence against the commander.

Tenth—Willful or unlawful destruction or obstruction of railroads which endanger human life.

Article 3.—If it be made to appear that extradition is sought with a view to try or punish the person demanded for an offense of a political character, surrender shall not take place; nor shall any person surrendered be tried or punished for any political offense committed previously to his extradition, nor for any offense other than that for which the extradition was granted; nor shall the surrender of any person be demanded for an offense committed prior to the date at which this convention shall take effect.

An attempt against the life of the head of either government or against that of any member of his family, when such attempt comprises the act either of murder, of assassination or poisoning or of accesssory thereto, shall not be considered a political or an act connected with such an offense.

Article 4.—The contracting parties shall not be required to deliver up their own citizens or subjects in virtue of the stipulations of the present convention.

Article 5—if the person demanded be held for trial in the country on which the demand is made, it shall be optional with the latter to grant extradition or to proceed with the trial; provided, that unless the trial shall be for the crime for which the fugitive is claimed, the delay shall not prevent ultimate extradition.

Article 6—Requisitions for the surrender of fugitives from justice, accused or convicted of any of the crimes or offenses herein before mentioned, shall be made by the diplomatic agents of the demanding government. In case of absence of such agent, either from the country or from the seat of government, such requisitions may be made by the superior consular officer.

Article 7—it shall be lawful for any competent judicial authority of the United States upon production of a certificate by the secretary of state, stating that request has been made by the imperial government of Russia for the provisional arrest of a person convicted or accused of the commission therein of a crime or offense extraditable under this convention, and upon complaint duly made, that such crime or offense has been so committed, to issue his warrant for the apprehension of such person.

But if the formal requisition for surrender, with the formal proofs hereinafter mentioned, but not made as aforesaid by the diplomatic agent of the demanding government, or, in his absence, by the competent consular officer, within 30 days from the date of the arrest of the fugitive, the prisoner shall be discharged from custody.

Article 8.—Articles in the possession of the fugitive that have aided the commission of the crime or offense, and any article or property which was obtained through the commission of the crime or offense charged, and also any other articles that may serve to convict shall, if the demand for extradition be granted, be delivered to the authorities of the demanding government, even where owing to the death or escape of the fugitive, extradition can not take place.

Article 9.—In case the person whose extradition is demanded under the present convention is also claimed by another government preference shall be given to the government whose demand shall be earlier in point of time, provided the government from which extradition is sought is not bound by treaty to give preference otherwise.

Article 10.—The expense occasioned by the arrest, detention and transportation of persons, whose extradition is requested, shall be borne by the person making the application.

Article 11.—The present convention shall be ratified, and the ratifications shall be exchanged at St. Petersburg as soon as possible. It shall take effect on the twentieth day after its promulgation in the manner prescribed by the laws in force in the territories of the contracting parties. It shall remain in force for six months after notice of its termination shall have been given by either of the contracting parties.

SENSATIONAL SHORTAGE.

A County Treasurer Asked to Resign and His Bondsman Will Settle.

JEFFERSONVILLE, Ind., June 7.—John A. Jenkins, for two and one-half years treasurer of Clark county, surprised the citizens of this city by resigning his office. His resignation was promptly accepted by the board of county commissioners, now in session, and Jenkins' deputy, Thomas B. Rader, was appointed to fill the unexpired term. The cause of Jenkins' resignation is due to a shortage, said to be in the aggregate $15,000.

It is also said that he had no idea of resigning until Monday, at which time he was checked up. An effort was made to keep the matter mum and have the shortage made good quietly, but it failed. Jenkins attributes his financial embarrassment to his going heavily in debt at the time he made his first can. The office pays $4,000 per annum, together with the emoluments, which swell it to about $5,000.

He was serving his second term, having been elected without opposition. His bond is $25,000, and to partially relieve his bondsman, his $5,000 residence, including furniture, horses and carriages, was made over to them. At the time of Jenkins' induction into office he was in failing health, which finally developed into consumption.

Death Under Fœcul Circumstances.

WABASH, Ind., June 7.—Prosper Bradbury, well known resident of Lagro township this county, died at his home, near Lagro, yesterday, under peculiar circumstances. Twenty years ago, Mr. Bradbury had his feet frozen gangrene supervened, both the feet literally rotting away, the half from the instep to the toes being entirely gone, with the exception of the toes, which dried and rolled up, the tendons shrinking as the flesh decayed. Blood poisoning followed, and a few months ago he began to fail and waste away until the end came. He was 65 years of age.

THE RUNS CONTINUE.

Still Chicago Banks Can Stand the Storm.

PLENTY MONEY FOR DEPOSITORS

Millions of Dollars Offered the Directors but Declined—No Further Failures Are Feared—Comptroller Eckels Talks on the Present Situation.

CHICAGO, June 7.—Between 1,200 and 1,500 people formed in line at the Illinois Trust and Savings bank to withdraw their deposits, although the bank had remained open till an early hour in the morning paying out money on demand. The crowd at the bank in the morning was several times larger than at any time since the run began.

At other savings banks, also, the run which began Monday seemed to have increased in proportion.

At the Illinois Trust and Savings bank the last depositor in the line got his money at 3 a.m.; then the bank closed until 10 o'clock in the morning.

The assets of the bank are counted up as follows: Cash on hand, $3,600,000; sundry bonds, $2,904,000; demand loans, $7,496,000; time loans, $5,300,000; real estate loans, $3,295,000; capital stock, $2,000,000; surplus, $1,600,000; stockholders' liability, $2,000,000; total, $23,114,000.

Not many years ago Portsmouth didn't have a sign of a shoe factory. Now that city has six or seven of these big factories, and they are all doing a fine business.

It's just as easy to make shoes in the Ohio Valley as it is in New England, and it would prove just as profitable here as it has up there. That is being demonstrated at Portsmouth. When will Maysville catch on?

SAYS the Cincinnati Enquirer: "Rev. Sam Jones, the evangelist, seems to be very popular in his own town, Carterville, Ga. Not long ago Erwin Maxwell, manager of the Emery Hotel, in this city, sold his beautiful place at Marietta, Ga., to Jones for $12,000. The reverend revivalist made all arrangements to move, but the people of his town would not have it. They protested against his leaving, and urged him so strongly to sell the Marietta property that he finally consented to do so. He lost $1,200 on his original bargain, but, the citizens of Carterville made up the difference, and Sam is still with them."

There are a few Kentucky editors—two or three only—who delight in belittling Mr. Jones and calling him a blackguard. Wonder how much the citizens of the towns where these editors live would pay to keep them from moving.

The Legislature.

The house has passed the bill empowering the Trustees of the State Normal School for colored persons to erect a dormitory, and appropriating $2,000 for that purpose.

The May bill, providing for the removal of the seat of Government from Frankfort to Lexington, had its second reading.

Mr. Stephenson's bill amending the revenue law so as to provide that bridges owned by railroad companies shall be assessed by the State Railroad Commission instead of by the County Assessor, was passed, notwithstanding some were of the opinion that it was unconstitutional on account of not setting forth the full section proposed to be amended.

Big Damages.

A big suit for breach of contract was decided Monday in favor of the plaintiff by United States District Judge Sage at Cincinnati. Compton, Ault & Co. had made a contract with the Mason & Foard Company on December 3, 1891, by which the latter agreed to sell to the former 4,800 dozen brooms upon orders of the former, who agreed to buy not less than four hundred dozen a month. The firm was also given the privilege of purchasing 7,200 dozen brooms.

A few months after the contract was made the Mason & Foard Company refused to sell Compton, Ault & Co. any more brooms because they claimed that they had not lived up to their contract of buying not less than four hundred dozen a month. After this the latter continued to give orders, but received no brooms, whereupon they brought suit for damages for breach of contract. Judge Sage allowed them damages for the market value of 6,600 dozen brooms, which were ordered and not delivered as per contract.

The defendants were lessees of Kentucky's convict labor at the time this contract was made.

In Memory of Michael T. Cone.

Died, at Dallas, Texas, May 24, 1893, Michael T. Cone, son of Michael P. Cone. News of his death caused considerable surprise to outside public, but his relatives and intimate friends two weeks ago prepared for the worst. The icy fingers of death had touched him, and the end was not far off. For three months past he had been in failing health, but he went about his accustomed duties daily. Eighteen months ago he was prostrated with an attack of the grippe, and the seeds were sown that destroyed a magnificent constitution and prepared the way for death. A month ago he visited Mineral Wells and rapidly grew worse. Finally, he told his physician that if death was coming he wanted to die at home and he returned to Dallas. All that medical science could do proved unavailing. The physicians said Bright's disease had seized him and death alone would release him from suffering.

Michael Cone was born in Galway, Ireland, thirty-five years ago. When seven years old his parents emigrated to America, and settled in Mason County, Kentucky. In 1875 he moved to Dallas, and lived there continuously from that time till his death, being associated in business with his brother-in-law, Thomas T. King. Mike Cone was a rugged, courageous and intelligent man; his son of honor, his word was as good as his bond. His friendship strong and enduring. He was an uncompromising Democrat and popular with all classes.

He represented the Sixth ward of Dallas four years in the City Council, and was one of the best men that ever held a seat in that body. Speaking of him, Alderman G. A. Knight said: "He was one of the noblest fellows I ever knew. What he thought was right he would do, regardless of consequences or effect upon the public, and in the four years of our intimacy in the Council I never knew a more honorable and conscientious man."

A widow and two children survive him. He was a member of the Uniform Bank of the Knights of Pythias, and was held in high esteem by the members of this powerful order.

Deceased was a communicant of the Roman Catholic Church, and was buried in accordance with rites of the church. The funeral moved from the family residence, 462 San Jacinto street, at 9:30, and the services were held at the Sacred Heart Church on Bryan street at 10 o'clock. Hundreds who knew and respected this man with a kindly nature and a generous heart, to whom an appeal of distress was never made in vain, were present to pay the last token of respect to a dead friend. Members and ex-members of the City Council and officers attended the funeral in a body.

Serious Difficulty Between Two Ex-Mays-villians at Cincinnati.

C. B. Clift Attacks Walter Blatterman—The Enquirer's Account of the Affair.

A difficulty that came near ending in bloodshed occurred Monday night at Cincinnati between two ex-Mays-villians—Walter Blatterman and Charleton B. Clift. The latter seems to have gotten the worst of it.

The Enquirer gives the following account of the affair: "The story of the occurrence is somewhat obscure, but those who witnessed the trouble say that Blatterman acted on the defensive. Blatterman and Charley Danzer, of the Alms & Doepe Company, were standing on Walnut street, near Fifth, discussing matters in general when Clift came along. It is said that Clift was considerably the worse for liquor and decidedly quarrelsome. Blatterman and Clift were schoolmates and playmates together when boys, and both of them have any amount of grit. Clift did not like Blatterman talking to Danzer for some reason not yet explained. He accosted Blatterman with the remark that he was talking to Danzer about him. The big salesman denied the charge, and tried to pacify Clift. 'We never mentioned your name,' said Blatterman, in a pacific way; 'we were discussing business tiredly.' Clift would not take the peace offering, and, drawing a knife, cried out: 'Well, I guess I'll cut your heart out, anyway.' Blatterman did not flinch, but tried to get Clift to go away. He told him he was drunk or he wouldn't talk that way, but the angry man was not to be pacified, and he followed Blatterman. The story is that Clift had his knife in his hand. Blatterman turned around and said: 'Clift, do you mean what you said?' 'Of course I do,' shouted the infuriated man. 'I will cut your heart out.'

"With this Clift is said to have made a lunge with the wicked-looking knife which he held in his hand, and he just grazed the right hand of Blatterman, cutting a slight gash between the third and little finger. Blatterman is a powerful man, and as the lunge was made he drove his right hand full under Clift's jaw and the knife-user fell to the floor, but was on his feet in an instant only to be floored again. When he jumped up Blatterman grabbed his hand, and holding his fist in a threatening manner told Clift to drop the knife or he would kill him. Just then Gordie Durrell wrested the grasp of the knife from Clift and the fight was over. Gordie tried to act as peace-maker. He asked Blatterman to take a drink with Clift, but he said that when Mr. Clift got sober he would talk to him. Both Clift and Blatterman are well known men, and well liked. There is no more genial and popular man in the community than Clift when he is himself, and his friends deplore the unfortunate occurrence. As the two men had always been fast friends up to Monday night, it is thought they will be brought together and their old relations restored. Blatterman declares that Clift is as game and fine a fellow as he ever saw, and would never have attacked him had he not been in his cups."

THE NEW CITY CHARTER.

Payment of Taxes Will Not Be Required to Entitle a Person to Vote Hereafter.

The new charter for cities of the fourth class will make a change in the qualification of voters in municipal elections in Maysville.

The payment of one's taxes has always been required heretofore to entitle him to vote for city officers. A clause of this character was inserted in the proposed new charter. The bill went to the Governor last Saturday, and it was learned Monday that he regarded the provision referred to unconstitutional.

It was determined, therefore, to ask for the return of the bill, and as the Governor did not desire to veto it, it was withdrawn yesterday and will be amended by the elimination of the objectionable clause, and in a few days will be before him in proper shape.

REPUBLICANS got the best of the Democrats in the city election at Ashland Monday, electing all the six councilmen. Judge Sam Savage was defeated for member of the School Board by Charles P. Green.

THE funeral of Mrs. Sudie Hundley occurred yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of Mr. John Boyer, of East Second. Services by Rev. D. P. Holt. She died a few days ago at Anchorage Asylum.

W. S. ROSENDALL, druggist, doing business at Aberdeen, filed a deed of assignment in the Probate Court at Cincinnati yesterday. W. E. Buney is the assignee. Assets $600 and liabilities $800. HAWAIIAN AFFAIRS.
The Steamer Gaelic Brings Some More Advice From Honolulu.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 7.—The steamer Gaelic has just arrived in this port, bringing advices from Honolulu up to May 30, as follows:

Affairs political have quieted considerably during the past five days.

Claus Spreckels created a mild sensation on May 29 by demanding immediate payment of $95,000 owed to him by the government, but, without waiting reply, left the same day to inspect a plantation in Hawaii. Spreckels is making a vigorous campaign against annexation. It is generally admitted that the resignation of Minister of Finance Porter was due to his influence.

For some days the officers of the provisional government have had under consideration instructions to be sent Minister Thurston about a treaty annexation. It has decided to instruct Thurston to ask among other things the control of government lands to be left to the Hawaiian government to be disposed under laws similar to the United States homestead laws. The labor question is also under discussion, and the policy of asking that the labor laws of the United States be suspended for a period of four years as regards their application to Hawaii is talked of.

Minister Blount regards the situation as peaceful, and thinks that whatever the solution of the political problem, there will be no fighting or bloodshed.

LIZZIE BORDEN'S TRIAL.

The Jury Sworn in and Government's Case Opened.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., June 6.—In the morning Miss Lizzie Borden and the jury were in their seats, and counsel were on hand busily arranging their papers. The doors were opened to spectators about that time, and at least a third of those present were women. State Detectives Seaver and Shaw were close to counsel for the prosecution as aids, and Detective Ducey, of Chelsea, who has been doing some quiet work on the fly for the defense, was ready for the call of the counsel on that side.

The jury heard the indictments against Miss Borden read as soon as court was formally opened, and were charged as good men and true, to stand together and harken to the evidence. Mr. Moody then stepped to the railing and opened the government's case. He then briefly ran over the details of the double murder, dwelling upon the narrow life of the inmates of the Borden family, and relating many incidents tending to show that ill-feeling had existed for years between the prisoner and her stepmother.

MAN'S SKULL CRUSHED.

Yellow Springs, O., the Scene of Another Mysterious Murder.

SPRINGFIELD, O., June 7.—Yellow Springs, eight miles south of here, was the scene of another frightful murder, committed in the same manner and, it is believed, with the same instrument, a dray pin, that the Koogler-Keys double murder was accomplished four months ago. The motive was the same, viz., robbery of a few paltry dollars.

This time the victim was Allen Wilson, a colored widower of 40 years, living alone in a little house on South College street. He was found at 6 o'clock Tuesday morning by a passerby, with his skull mashed in. He worked at the powdermills, and had just drawn his pay, $50, which is missing. The town, which is place of only 1,000, is greatly aroused over the deed.

This is the fourth murder in as many years. Some depraved colored people are suspected of being the guilty parties. All efforts so far to capture them have failed. It was on Dec. 19 that the Koogler-Keys murder was committed. He was an old soldier, and he and his paramour were found dead, lying side by side, and his pension money was gone.

FLOODS IN AUSTRIA.

A Number of Lives Lost and Vast Amounts of Property Destroyed.

VIENNA, June 7.—Excessive rains have swollen the rivers of Bukowina. Many streams have overflowed their banks and flooded the fields. The Pruth has risen so high near Czernowitz as to inundate the suburbs and to threaten the least elevated districts of the city.

The Czermosz broke over its banks at Wiznitz Monday night and ran in torrents through the streets. Sixteen houses collapsed and many others were rendered uninhabitable. Eleven persons were killed by falling timbers or were drowned in the flood. Scores of families had to flee for their lives without pausing to save property. The whole town is in danger of being laid waste.

Fire Caused by Lightning.

BROOKLYN, June 7.—One of the buildings of the New York Housing company, on the water front, in which was stored $1,200,000 worth of cotton, was struck and set on fire by lightning. The firemen confined the fire to building "D." The loss, it is estimated, will reach $100,000; insured.

Distilleries All to Shut Down.

PEORIA, Ill., June 7.—The board of directors of the Distilling and Cattle Feeding company have concluded their local labors and adjourned. The company has concluded to shut down for an indefinite period every distillery operated throughout the country.

A Big Fire in St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, June 7.—A fire just before daylight destroyed the Schelp wagon and carriage factory, Levee and Carr streets. Damage to stock, $50,000; to machinery, $25,000; to building, $15,000; total, $90,000; fully insured.

Julius Balke, Sr., Dead.

CINCINNATI, June 7.—Julius Balke, Sr., one of Cincinnati's oldest and wealthiest citizens, and for many years the vice president of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company, engaged in the billiard manufacturing business, died at his residence on Walnut Hills Tuesday, aged 63. His death was due to heart failure.
